Build Resilience for yourself and your business

In times of difficulty we need to draw upon our resilience to push through as individuals, as a team and as businesses.

Is your organisation resilient enough to weather a local or global disaster?

How can you make sure it is?

This worksheet will assist in walking you through 9 simple questions to support you building your business resilience in a time when we all really need it most.

1. RESILIENCE OF THE LEADER / BUSINESS OWNER

Building your business resilience requires you, as a manager, leader or business owner, to lead from the front.

Being a flexible and adaptable leader is imperative for navigating situations of flux. It will require you, as an individual, to acknowledge your own discomfort and overall uncertainties to develop a broader perspective your staff can draw upon to frame their own coping mechanisms as employees during difficult times.

Ask yourself these 3 quick questions to test your resilience as a leader:

- 1. Are your processes & policies suitable for adaptation? Yes What necessary changes do you need to build in-to these documents to keep pace with unsettling times?
- 2. On a scale of 1 to 5, rate your personal and mental resilience to lead a team of employees through a difficult situation. 1 - improvement needed to 5 - extremely resilient.

What are some areas you need to work on to build your arsenal of coping techniques? Examples; more quiet time, review social networks, reading / self-learning, etc.

3. What does your organisation need to survive in this environment?

- 2 -

Are there mechanisms in place for the organisation to access the support it needs, as an entity, to overcome obstacles? Examples; government support, engage a consultant, outsource skilled resources, etc.

2. RESILIENCE OF THE STAFF

The resilience of your staff will have a direct impact on the output of your business, even when we are not in a state of global unrest.

There are many factors that can affect staff morale and overall capability, and as a leader or business owner, it is important to remain on top of staff-related issues so the cogs of your business operations keep running smoothly.

511	looting.
1.	Are your staff open to adapting to change without obstinacy or ego? What changes or improvements can you implement to encourage cooperation?	Yes	No
2.	Has your business overcome a hurdle before, small or large? What did you learn from past mistakes?	Yes	No
_
	Can you use those learnings to frame direction in these trying times?	Yes	No
3.	Do you have a support plan in place to acknowledge staffing issues?	Yes	No
	How can you implement processes to better communicate with employees to ensure harmonicate remains intact amongst your people?	ony and
_

3. RESILIENCE OF THE BUSINESS

A resilient organisation is one capable of facing obstacles head on, and as a unified front.

In tough economic times, the resilience of your business is of utmost importance, and if it has taken a global crisis to make you question it, don't fear, it's never too late to start building business resilience.

	To k	begin	this	end	leav	or,	asl	< :
--	------	-------	------	-----	------	-----	-----	---------------

	scale of 1 to 5, how flexible are yo provement needed, 5 - extremel		modating change?
Chan	ges to your planning (business c	ontinuity plan/ recessic	n plan)
	2 —	3 —	4 —
Chanç	ges in the present (during a crisi	s to bounce back quick	ly)
	2 ———	3 ———	4 —
Chan	ges for the future (mitigating risl	k and exposure for succ	ess)
	2	3	4
What a	are your areas of weakness and	how can you re-strengt	hen them?
While	are your areas of weakness and lit can be uncomfortable for you and planning for change is a sur	to highlight the things	you don't do so well; acknowled
While	it can be uncomfortable for you	to highlight the things	you don't do so well; acknowled
While	it can be uncomfortable for you and planning for change is a sur	to highlight the things	you don't do so well; acknowledence for your business into the f
While	it can be uncomfortable for you and planning for change is a sur	to highlight the things	you don't do so well; acknowledence for your business into the f

3. What are the things that are out of your control?

Accept the things you cannot change.

While it is important to focus on the things you can change, it is also important, from a resilience perspective, to concede that not every obstacle is one which you can overcome. Make a list and acknowledge the things that are out of your control and let them go so you can stop worrying about them, giving headspace to focus your time and attention on moving towards success.

Things outside my control;

Times of change and difficulty are often also times of growth. No time you spend building the resilience of your business is wasted, so ensure you remind yourself of the great opportunities for growth available in times of struggle. You are not alone and you're doing a great job!

About Us

Ingredior is your 'whole-of-business' multi-discipline approach to strategy and operation activity for businesses in the GROWTH SCALE phase.

www.ingredior.com.au

™ marketing@ingredior.com.au